A Performance-Driven Management System Can Help You Grow a Great Program

Every program or project leader can benefit by applying a more strategic approach to building a better civil legal aid program. This workshop will introduce participants to the essential elements of what we call “performance-driven management” — an approach to program enhancement that The Resource has distilled from more than 20 years of helping civil justice programs and their funders achieve extraordinary results. The essential elements of “performance-driven management” include:

- Practical legal needs assessments. Use affordable techniques and existing data to craft a powerful strategic tool that not only identifies clients’ critical legal needs, but yields fundable projects to address them.
- Outcome-focused program assessment. Measure the results of your projects, and then make the data pay — in better outcomes for clients, improved staff morale, and a compelling “story” for funders.
- Results-driven strategic marketing. Tap new resources by linking the interests of potential funders and partners to your program’s great story of identified need, high performance, and powerful results.

What to Expect:

- A hands-on approach. The Resource’s workshops are active experiences. You do not simply sit and listen. We engage you in discussions. You get input from your peers. And most importantly, you apply the tools we teach to the “back home” situation that brought you to the workshop. We want you to walk away with specific, concrete steps you can take to improve your program’s performance and increase its resources.
- “Big picture” time. Getting away from the office is important. Busy managers and advocates rarely have time to hone their professional skills and consider “the big picture” while tending to the daily demands of office life. This workshop provides a unique environment for professional growth. We bring experienced people together in a relaxed, resort setting. We provide great facilitators. And we provide enough time for people to get their hands around the topic. The result is a learning experience that will make you a better leader of a stronger program.
- A great locale. Traverse City is a gem of a small town on northern Lake Michigan’s Grand Traverse Bay. It is at the hub of a five-county resort area that boasts some of the Great Lakes’ finest beaches, walking and biking trails, wineries, golf courses and a National Park. In mid-October, fall colors should be stunning and salmon will be making their annual trek up river from Lake Michigan. You will be able to take in the vistas from our conference site, the Bayshore Resort. It sits on the beach in the heart of Traverse City, just a ten-minute walk to downtown shops, restaurants, and galleries.

- Fun. We’ve built in time for you to share food and laughter with your colleagues from across the country. A wine and cheese reception greets you Tuesday evening as you arrive. Optional group dinner outings are scheduled for Wednesday and Thursday evenings at a couple of the local gathering spots that make Traverse City a regional favorite for visitors — cost will be $15-25. You are also encouraged to stay over after the workshop and explore other attractions in the region. See the Visitors Bureau website for more information on things to see and do: www.VisitTraverseCity.com.

Air Travel

Northwest, American, Delta and United Airlines provide good connections to Traverse City with comfortable jet and large-propjet service, connecting through Detroit, Chicago and Minneapolis.

Local transportation

You probably will not need a car during the workshop. The Bayshore Resort will supply free shuttle service from Traverse City Cherry Capital Airport, and restaurants, shops and recreational facilities are within easy walking distance from the resort. For those who wish to do further sight-seeing while in the area, car rentals from Avis, Budget, Enterprise, Hertz, and National are available at the airport.

You should attend if you are . . .

- An executive director or program manager seeking to dramatically increase your program's impact on the legal needs of the client community.
- A resource development professional seeking new strategies that will improve the success of your campaigns.
- A funder seeking to better understand how to improve the performance of the programs you are overseeing.
- A participant in an Access-to-Justice group seeking to expand resources for civil justice in your state.
- An advocate seeking practical tools to make you more effective in your work.

Who We Are

At The Resource for Great Programs, Inc., we are intent upon helping state justice communities expand access to the civil justice system for the poorest and most vulnerable members of our society. We know state justice communities can do it. We know we can help.

We focus our work on three key leverage points through which small dollar investments can yield extraordinary results:

1. Resource Development. We work with program managers and leaders to generate new funding streams, recruit new partners and attract new volunteers.
2. Service Delivery Technology. We help our clients apply the powerful tools of performance-driven management to dramatically improve program effectiveness.
3. Leadership. Leadership is about making something happen that wouldn't have happened on its own. We build a "leadership expectation" into everything we do. The outcome of our work with programs and funders is not just a report, but a clearly-defined set of action initiatives by which our clients can take the next step of enrolling colleagues and partners in moving forward together on the path to Full Access!

Our principals are seasoned national experts in core management, research and leadership disciplines. They include Ken Smith, founder and president of the company, Kathleen Brockel, Kathy Garwold, Susan Lucas, Kelly Thayer, and Matt Weber.
